ET J. WELLINGTON WELCH.

I saw a monarch on his throne of state. A host of jewelled courtiers lingered near, While countless slaves stood by his wish to wait, And music's notefell on the list'ning ear; The form of beauty oft his palace graced, Early and late the sennds of revelry pprose; Eare fruits and wines were brought to tempt his taste. And perfumed zephyrs lulled him to rapose. But yet his breast was filled with griet and care He could not sleep because of troublous dreams, And as I gazed upon that monarch there, I said aloud, "Life is not what it seems."

I took my way into a peasant'scot, The roof of which would scarce keep out the

Though he was very poor, he murmured not, Nor did I hear him even once complain; And when his weary day of toil was done, Upon a bed of straw he'd stretch his frame, And strive some sleep to gain, ere yet the sun Roused him to toil, another day, the same: But still his heart was ever light, for there Peace dwell and brought him pleasant dreams And as I gazed on him so free from care, I said again, "Life is not what it seems.

Yon'll find it thus wherever you may go, The eye may smile, but, alil the heart doth pine, Homes where there seems nought elsesave wee, Muy be the dwellings where Peace e'er doth MORPHIA AND TINCTURE OF IODINE FOR NECEALGIA. - The following method of suc cessfully treating that painful diseaseneuralgia-is from the Dublin Medical Press: As a corollary to his remarks on the efficacy of tineture of jodine in the treatment of neuralgia M. Bouchut adduced several cases from which it appears that when the remedy in it's pure state has prov ed unavailing, the pain sometimes yields in a remerkable manner when a certain amount of morphia has been added to the tincture. In this instance the application is not merely counter irritant; indeed in this respect the fluid would seem to have lost some power; its efficacy is chiefly due to the presence of the sellative, the introduction of which beneath the coldermis is 1acilitated by the tincture of iodiae. Whatever explanation may be offered of the effects of this mode of treatment, its beneficial operation is an urquestionable fuct, deserving of every attention. Thus, we noticed in M. Bouchut's wards, a little g'rl who, while recovering from typhoid, hecame affected with pneralga of the forehead and temple; pure tincture of iodine failed in relieving the pain. M. Bouchat ordered the brow to be painted over three Silver Flated and Britannia Tea Sets, times a day with a solution of half a alrechm of sulphate of morphia in half an ounce of Plated Table Ware; Ivory, Bone and Wool tincture of iodine, and a cure was effected in the course of three days. The Professor adopted the same method of treatment in the case of a larly, aged lifty-two, suffering from Interscapular neuralgia, symptomatic of chronic pulmonary disease. Morning and evening the sedative tincince was applied to these regions, and on the second day amendment set in, and the neuralgia was altogether removed on the fourth day.

"An Alabamlan, a few days ago, went out to see the depot of the Mobile and Ohio The Very Best of PURE COAL OIL, railroad. Near the deput were several Irish draymen. Thloking to quiz them, he shouted to one, "flas the rail, oad got in?", One ind has, sur," was the reparte tesponse

"What is polygamy?" ask Iks, slumbled over the word in the paper. Mrs. Partington looked severe, "Polygamy," said she, "is where men have libertine privilege of marrying a plenrisy of wives, God bless'em when they can't take care of one as she ought: to be, with cotton flannell forty cents s yard, and flour at lebulous prices."

Cicero calls justice "the mistress and overn of all virtue," and injustice, the foundation of every vice. That is what is the matter with this Administration—it started on a career of injustice, and every inch of its path is marked with blond and crime.

DIVERCES IN PHILADELPHIA .- There have been during the past year one hundred and filty-six applications for divorce, being an increase of two on the previous year; and deing one out of thirty-five of the marriages. If we add to this the number of those who suffer silently the mislortunes of unhappy attachments, the proportion of foolleh and unfortunate weddings to wise and judicious ones will be about five per cent. Of the above one hundred and fifty. six applications for divorce there were ninty one in which desertion was the alleged ground; forly-one in whileh adultery was the cause; nineteen for ill-treatment, two for bigamy, and three for hab to al duik. entiers. In hinety one of the above enerthe fine were triught by the wife and in six'y five by the husband.
